

<Marine Life Rearing Log>

9 AM, September 11, 2023

Weather: Sunny

Water temperature: 18.7°C

A keeper was bitten by a flounder. He was holding his hand above the tank to check on the condition of the flounder and watching its movement, when it suddenly leapt out of the water and snapped at him! Its sharp teeth drew blood. A carnivorous fish indeed. We should have been more careful. (The tank at which the bite took place was not in a controlled zone.)

